WHEN BABY SOULS SAIL OUT.

When from our mortal vision Grown men and women go
To strange seas clysian,
And know what spirits know, I think of them as tourists, In some sun gilded clims, Mong happy aghts and dear delights We all shall find in time.

But when a child goes yonder, And leaves its mother here, Its little feet must wander, It seems to me, in fear What paths of Eden beauty, What scenes of peace and rest Can bring content to babes that went Forth from a mother's breast?

In palace gardens lonely, A child astray will mean,
And weep for pleasures only
Found in its humble home.
It is not won by splendor
Nor bought by costly toys;
A bid from harm in mothes To hide from harm in m Makes all its sum of joys.

It must be when the baby Goes journeying off alone Some angel (Mary, maybe), Adopts it as her own. Yet when a child is taken Whose mother stays below With weeping eyes through Paradise I seem to see it go.

With barps of angels trying To drive away its fear, I seem to hear it crying,
"I want my mamma here!"
I do not court the fancy,
It is not based on doubt— It is not based on do It is a thought that comes unsought
When baby souls sail out.

What's the Matter with P7 A pious and prosperous old deacon of Portsmonth, N. H., had been speculating in pork on a "margin," and for some months was very successful in his ventures, so that he saw visions of great wealth in the sear future. But after a time pork did no. pay so well, and still he kept specularu g, until a sudden panic in pork caused Lim to lose heavily, and to square himself he placed an attachment to the amount he had lost on his brokers, and sought to recover by law what he had lost by luck.

This sudden catastrophe, of course, noised the secret of the deacon's speculations abroad, and his unseemly Laste for wealth became the talk of the town. But the deacon braved it down and went about the streets with his head as high as Salt Water Evidences. As you go down the steep hill at the new cemetery which leads to the basin way down, on the right and left you will see a bed of shells of marine fish. It is plainly defiled on the wall of either emthat at one period of the world's history our little Ocopilco, at times only a few spans wide, was a large salt water river, with ebb and flow of tide, and that some prehistoric race gathered oysters and left the shells piled up where they are now visible. Who were they? The question will doubtless remain forever unanswered. Not a trace of them has been found, unless the oyster shells mentioned be one; but it is thought by many that this continent was inhabited centuries before man (Ga.) Press.

God's or Shakespeare's.

The vicar of Stratford-on-Avon preached a secmon in justification of the projected further mutilation of his church by the erection of a huge and unsightly reredos. The reverend gentleman's line of defense is highly interesting, witness the following:

"Nobody needs accuse me of want of reverence for the poet's memory, or want of care for his last resting place. But, though I do not object to this church being commonly called Shakespeare's church, nor to receive gifts for it in henor of his immortal memory, still, our primary object in promoting its beatification is that it is God's house."

Candid, at any rate! When I want money for it, it is Shakespeare's church. When I want to spend the money in accordance with my own ideas, and in defiance of the general sentiment of the nation, then it is God's house.--London

TALES OF OLD TIMES ON THE RIVER TOLD BY VETERANS.

A Queer Little Craft and Her Cranky Capers—Ennning Twice Around a Big Steamer Under Full Headway-The Dare Devil Trick of Tom Gross.

The old time steamboatmen are not all dead. Many of them still linger on the stage of life, though in these days of rapid transit and railroad rush they are probably looked upon as superfluous. Between them, howupon as supermous, netween them, now-ever, there exists a sort of freemasoury that draws them closer and closer together as their ranks are thinned by death. In all the large river cities there exist little coteries some places only two or three; in others, large numbers—who preserve among them-selves a formal or informal club or association and meet at stated or irregular intervals and talk over old times.

The writer was one of a little group of these kindred souls a short time ago, when one of them recited a little incident that will long live in the traditions of the Ohio river.

A QUEER CRAFT'S CAPERS. Two steamers were bound up the river between Cincumsti and Louisville. One of them was a large and wheeler—either the steamers known in those days as a "Cincun-nati tub," with a model like a cheese box. she was running in the Cincinnati and Mem-phis trade. The other was a little stern-wheeler named the Volunteer, running in the Cincinnati and Cumberland river trade. She " s a curious sort of a craft and he ly cranky habits. Her hull had formerly been a canal boat. A pair of heavy towboat engines had been put on this hull and a sort or box cabin constructed. She could run like a scared wolf, but, as stated, had cranky habits. She had balance rudders that some how or other were never exactly in the position they should be, and altogether this queer craft was a terror to pilots. She belonged to three men, all well known in St. Louisat that time, and whose memories are still cherished here by hosts of friends. They were James L Maginnis, William Reilly and William

Burt. On the occasion referred to the Volunteer overhauled the Cincinnati tub and passed her on the starboard side, when the rudders got crossed, or something happened to cause the little stern wheeler to cut one of her cranky capers. When probably her length ahead of the side wheeler she "took a sheer," and ran squarely across the bow of the big boat.

Hiram O. Brazee, a well known pilot, until recently inspector at Memphis, was, he thought, in the pilot house. He saw there was no use of trying to pull her back, and to stop was to let the side wheeler run her down, so he simply pulled the wheel hard down, and the little stern wheeler actually ran clear around the Cincinnati tub, coming up again tais was going on the little boat straightened days for the steamers bound up stream to take fuel barges—coal or wood—in tow, and continue the trip while transferring the fuel from barge to steamer When the fuel was transferred the barge would be set aduft, with one man on board, who would care for and land it. There were two magnificent of the Ocopilco, and when about half boats plying in the Cincinnati and Louisville packet trade, the America and the United States. They were probably the finest and, without doubt, the fastest boats bankment, and would seem to indicate affect They were beautiful steamers, and constructed on such perfect lines that their pilots could control them as closely as craft was ever controlled. The pilots of these steamers used to indulge in a little trick for their own amusement, which was a cause of great trouble to the pilots and commanders of other boats. It was this: On meeting another boat the signal would be sounded for passing, but when the two boats would get close together the pilot on the big packet would turn his boat, as if with the deliberate intention of running into the other boat.

To avoid a collision the other boat would of course be stopped and backed. The big the Indians got possession of it, and by a boat, however, under perfect control, would race of people well versed in the arts and sciences. Recent discoveries of ancient full headway run right up, and, curving cities buried deep beneath the earth, over gracefully, pass on, sometimes so close as the cities buried deep beneath the earth, over which forest trees perhaps centuries old make it appear that only a miracle prevented a collision. These pilots had learned to conthat our continent once led the world in that our continent once led the world in fine architecture, in the science, and in all the elegancies of refined life.—Quit man (Ga.) Press. scared out of him on two or three occasion by these fellows, was at the wheel on board the Volunteer on a trip up the river when one of these big boats was met. Gross knew what was going to happen, and conceived a plan for turning the tables on the jokers. The Volunteer had a wood barge in tow, and had transferred the fuel, but at the request of the owner was towing the boat to a point up the river Gross called a cub pilot to take the wheel and went below, first cautioning the cub not to get frightened at the big boat, but just to "hold her straight up the river and not ring a single bell." Taking an ax in his hands, Gross stationed himself right by the head line by which the barge was fastened to the boat. On came the big steamer, bearing right down on the Volunteer, and it was quite evi-dent she would pass very close and on the father, having some bodly malady for which dent sne would pass very case and on the same side the barge was on. Gross had guessed right, for before the pilot on the big boat could turn his wheel or ring a bell the steamer struck the barge broadside and crushed it, and at the same time broke so many timbers for the steamer that she was compelled to run for shore. The barge sunk, but it oss had been careful that there should be so one on it, and only two or three persons had seen him cut the line. ed places and yelled, "Shine, sahi has The owner of the barge collected damages disappeared entirely from the New York from the steamer that ian it down. PORTUGUESE BULL FIGHTING.

While the Sport Is Exciting It Seldom Results Fatally.

The 13th of June is a great gala day in China. The unjust punishment of a celebrated No knacker's yard horses are brought into the ring to be butchered unresisting. There are no picadors of the low Spanish type, with leatures of the day Offerings of rice are thrown into the water to feed the martyr's spirit. The dragon boats, long and narrow, horses incapable of flight from the buil, the Portuguese pleader being generally a gentle-man by birth—of a class, that is, with whom the management of the "great horse" is a traditional accomplishment. He is neither built and owned by different clans, guilds or villages, and great is the rivalry between them. The large boats, decorated with silk banners and em roldered flags, are attended protected by armor nor does he carry any reapon either of offense or of defense. Horse and rider preserve the traditions of this ancient chivalrous art; the rider by wearing a rich, gold laced costume of the sixteenth contury, the horse by his careful training and tury, the horse by his careful training and magnificent silken and gold caparisons.

To equalize the odds between the bull and his batters, his horns are tipped; and yet, even with this handicapping, the Portuguese bull has much the best of it. He is never seriously hurt; indeed, in my belief, he is never hurt at all, and he enjoys the delight—the intense delight, common to all man and all animals of natural courage—of being put to a boundless and justifiable rage with his They also take charge of the gifts of wine and roast pig which are sent out to the boats by all animals of natural courage—or being put in a boundless and justifiable rage with his gnemies. He charges at the first living creature in his path; the blinder and maddar his resh the sofar is the blinder and madder his rush the safer is the bull fighter. The man holds his scarlet, silk-en clock in front of hun, and, behind its Silver Moon or Glendale, the narrator forgot shelter darts to one side as the built is on which. Anyhow, it was one of the class of him, and the built's horns meet only the silk and the empty air. A mistake of a fraction of a second in his action may cost the man his hie, and the right performance of this difficult feat of cozening the bull with the cleak is the bull fighter's first elementary ac-

When 7 years old he was put under the private tuition of Telander, a teacher of only the ordinary stamp, and three years later was sent to Wexio to school, his father wishing to prepare him for holy orders. The story was the same at both places. He made no progress in the routine studies of the course, except in mathematics and physics, but used every opportunity to look after flowers and turn over books of botany. With Gabriel Hok he did a little better, for the teacher allowed him some liberty to gratify his tastes; but the people at the gymnasium were again troubled by his perversity Finally the father and the teachers held a con sultation, and it was decided that, although his moral record was unexceptionable, he offered no promise as a scholar, and must learn a trade. The Man in the Moon. Most persons are under the impression that this familiar expression refers only to the faint appearance of a face which the moon presents when full. But those better acquainted with folk lore are aware that the object referred to under the name of the Man in the Moon is a dusky resemblance to a hu man ligure which appears on the western side of the luminary when eight days old. The figure is something like that of a man in the act of climbing, and carrying a thorn bush upon his back. There is a detached object before him which looks something like a dog Among various nations it is a popular notion that this figure is the man referred to in the book of Numbers (N Bet seq) as having h on detected by the couldren of Israel in the willierness in the act of gathering staks on the Sabbath day, and we om the Lord duccted to be stoned to death without the camp.-Lippincott's Magazine.

STANDING OF CANDIDATES.

The Washington correspondent of the Chicago Tribune has made a canvass of the standing of the five pronounced candidates for Speaker of the next House of Representatives. The result shows that no one of them has a support that justifles him in counting upon success as assured, and that there is certain to be a very intereating contest, with a "dark horse" as a possibility. THE MOST LOVELY PORTION OF RENO.

Facing the Truckee -The Aristocratic Avenue Riverside Driveway-Splendid Sewerage-Healthy Location and Safe From Fire.

The propretor is now ready to receive proposals for lots in Powning's Addition. The map gives a good idea of the fract, which is situated between the Central Pacific Railroad and the Truckee River, and commences on the west at a point three blocks distant from Virginia Street, making it the most central and convenient of any portion of the rapidly growing town of Reno. Unlike any other part of the town this Addition faces the beautiful Truckee River and Riverside Avenue is certain to become the fashionable driveway of the country. The streets are 80 feet wide, while Riverside and Keystone Avenues are intended to be 100 feet in width. All alleys are 20 feet wide. The soil is a rich gravelly loam, and susceptible of the highest state of cultivation. Being situated as it is it is more safe from fire than any other section. The regular lots: are 50x140 feet. The sewerage is perfect.

Before Buying Elsewhere Parties will do Well to Look at These Lots.

Reno's geographical position is excellent. It is on the line of the Central Pacific Railroad, only 154 miles from Sacramento, and 244 miles from San Francisco. It is the terminus of the Virginia and Truckee Railroad running south, and of the Nevada and California Railroad running north. It has two Flouring Mills, Planing Mills, three Nurseries, a Soap Factory, Reduction Works, and other industries. A great Woolen Mill and a Sash, Door, Blind and Box Factory, are about to be established.

Reno has the Bank of Nevada with $300,000 capital, and the First National Bank with $200,000 capital. It has two fine papers in the DAILY and Weekly Nevada State JOURNAL and the Daily and The Healthiest Town! Weekly Gazette.
